Sharing your medical information

Background

For a number of years, work has been ongoing to improve the way that medical records are made available to treating clinicians. Our main computer system is called SystmOne, which has the advantage of enabling information to be shared between certain health professionals.

Enhanced Data Sharing Model (EDSM) enables us, with your consent, to share your medical records with Trusted Sites in the NHS Nationally who are involved in your care.

As EDSM has been designed to enhance patient care we will automatically 'opt you in' to both parts of the scheme. You will need to advise us if you do not want your record to be shared.

NHS staff can only access shared information if they are involved in your care and as it is an electronic service. An audit log is maintained showing when and who has accessed medical records. These audits cannot be erased.

EDSM should not be confused with care.data. EDSM only allows those treating you to access medical records. It does not enable your records to be used for research or other purposes.

We already share records of children for child protection reasons and patients who are under the care of the District Nursing Team. This helps clinicians to make decisions based upon a wider knowledge of you and also helps to reduce the number of times that you or your family members are asked the same questions. In short it assists clinicians to provide more 'joined up care'.

If I agreed, who could see my records?

EDSM will allow clinicians treating you anywhere in the country, who have access to SystmOne and who also have authorised access via user name and password (or smartcard) to view and in some cases update your medical records. This includes Other GP Surgeries, Walk-In-Centres, many departments at local hospitals (including A&E), social care and community services, such as the District Nursing Team. It could also be in any part of the country. It is anticipated that over time more health services around the country will be able to benefit from EDSM.

Clinicians outside of your own surgery who wish to access your medical records will ask for your permission to do so. Some NHS sites in the local area are set as trusted by your GP. These sites will still ask for your permission.

Other sites that are not in your local area may not be set up as trusted. This does not mean they are not trust worthy, it merely means that they are not known and we thought it wise to get your specific permission in these instances. They will ask your permission and at the same time request a onetime code. This one-time code will be sent to you immediately via SMS or Email or can be accessed using your online account if you have one (see here for more information). For these instances, it is important, that your practices have your mobile number or your email account. The site treating you will not be able to access your data until you have provided them with your one-time code.

Can I 'opt out' or pick and choose who sees my record?

Yes, you can.

You can do this either by asking the practice to do this for you or via your own on-line access to your GP record which is a much better way. On-line you will be able to change your consent settings and make changes to the organisation that are trusted or those that will need to ask you for a one-time code before they are able to view your record.

Under EDSM there are two levels of consent. The first is to agree to sharing your medical records OUT of the practice. This is your agreement that records maintained by your GP can be seen, subject to your authority at the time, by clinicians working outside of the surgery. The second is agreeing to share your records IN. This means that your GP can see the records made by other health professionals who have access to EDSM.

However, as the treating clinician needs to ask your permission to see the records at the beginning of each period of care you are in control of who can see your medical information.

For example the diagram below shows that the patient has agreed to share his medical records with the District Nurse and the surgery. However, whilst he is happy for his GP to see notes made by the local smoking cessation adviser he doesn't want the adviser to have access to his other medical records.

As EDSM has been designed to enhance patient care we will automatically 'opt you in' to both parts of the scheme.

If you prefer not to be then please mention it to a member of the reception team. You are free to change your mind at any time.

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

I can see the benefits of the other people treating me seeing my notes, but what if there is a matter that I want to stay just between me and my doctor?

You can ask for any consultation to be marked as private, this means that viewing is restricted to the surgery, but allows the rest of the record to be viewed by whoever else has your permission to treat you. It is your responsibility to ask for a consultation to be marked as private.

Haven't I agreed/disagreed to do this before?

EDSM may seem very similar to patients as the Summary Care Record which went live some years ago. The Summary Care Record contains only a very small part of your record that is available to be seen by clinicians who might be treating you in A+E departments, Walk In Centres or if you register temporarily somewhere else within the UK.

The Summary Care Record allows other NHS Services to see your current medications and the drugs that you are allergic or sensitive to. Your Summary Care Record can be enriched by your GP to include information that it is important to pass on in the case of an emergency.

Can I change my mind?

Yes, you can always change your mind and amend who you consent to see your records. For instance you can decline to share your records out from the surgery, but if you built up a relationship with the physiotherapist who was treating you and they asked you if they could look at an x-ray report, you could give your consent at that point for them to view your records. You will be referred to us to change your preference, so the physio treating won't be able to see your records instantly, but should be able to by the next time of your next appointment. You could change it yourself online in which case the physiotherapist will be able to see it immediately.

If I decline—what happens in an emergency?

In the event of a medical emergency, for instance if you were taken unconscious to A+E, and the clinician treating you feels it is important to be able to see your medical records he is able to override any consents set. However, the doctor has to give a written reason for doing so. Where this happens an audit is undertaken by the local Caldicott Guardian (the person with overall responsibility for Data Protection compliance).

Can anyone else see my medical records?

On a daily basis, we get requests from Insurance Companies to either have copies of medical records or excerpts from patients' medical records. This requires your signed consent as it has not been requested to treat/care for you.

Occasionally we are asked for information from the medical records for legal reasons, again this has to be done with your written consent, or in very exceptional circumstances, by court order.

Can I see who has accessed my record?

Yes, you can – If you have set up an online account for access to your medical record you will be able to see who has accessed your record and NHS site they work at. If you think someone has accessed your record that should not have done so then you can report it to your GP practice.

If you want to set up access to your medical record just ask at your GP surgery. (You may need to take phot ID if they do not know you personally). This link has more information about online access.

Any questions?

If you have any questions, please speak to reception. If necessary the receptionist will arrange for someone to give you a call.
